

Everything you need to know about

Rwanda

The 3 major national parks of Rwanda offer up an incredible diversity of potential wildlife encounters,

Rwanda is a country of ever-changing landscapes ranging from rocky mountains, to dense green rainforests and expansive savannah plains. Such biodiversity brings a unique and varied spectrum of wildlife experiences to all those that dare to venture into the remote regions of Africa.

Wildlife

Gorilla

Primates

Giraffe

Hippo

Rwanda highlights

1/4

Gorilla Trekking

Rwanda's Gorilla Trekking is a unique and impactful experience, with both Mountain Gorillas and Chimpanzees resident to Volcanoes National Park you're able to encounter 2 of the Great Apes in one trip. Due to the slightly easier navigated landscape than Uganda, treks to find one of the seven gorilla groups in Rwanda appeal to a wider age and fitness range.

2/4

Volcanoes National Park

This is the most famous National Park in Rwanda, and for good reason. The park runs along the border of the Congo and Uganda, and is home to Mountain Gorillas, Chimpanzees and Golden Monkeys. The dense jungle, incredible valleys and intense wildlife encounters make this one of our favourite parks in the world.

3/4

Akagera National Park

The Akagera National Park is one of central Africa's last-remaining refuges for endemic savannah wildlife in Rwanda and the largest protected wetland in the region.

4/4

Lake Kivu

One of Africa's Great Lakes, Lake Kivu is a sight to see. This 90km long, 50km wide lake lies across the Rwanda and DRC border and offers visitors the opportunity to pull a kayak into the water or board a boat and experience Rwanda from a completely different perspective.

Best time to go (and why)

From December to February, June to September

The dry seasons from December to February and June to September offer you the best conditions for gorilla trekking.